they're country, shild; I see the flag they so construe, child; I see the degin fifth radiance glosm;
My hay, it was thy father a pride—
His manhood's latest drasm;
I se sees him, when the hattle's light
From near, by field and flood;
Swear that, full high, our flag should wave,
Though drenched in traiter blood.

And, boy, his stiffening hand held fast That plurious peanen hold.
When every obtains through of his
Mutassed its firmer hold;
They laid him in a coldier's grave.

And o'er his pulseless breast, Each circlet of that hanner true, Enriched his place of rest. The grandetre, at his country's east,
Went forth to most the fos;
But shild, it was no traifer hand
That laid his true heart low.
A hase swept o're the dring face,

they dy! our country's fos, they dy!
He smitled, his well, and died.

He wall could die, for tyrant hordes Were laid in come of gore, And Ditione, driven from our shores, Invade our home no more. He well could die I n'er every see,
The pennant of the brave
For years hath beamed, a beacon light,

The mar of every wave The crushed, oppressed, of Eastern lands, Whone or in Orient seas, That flag waved n'er our merchantmen, Or flaunted to the breeze, Have turned their aching eyes afar, And blessed with hery light,

Our guiding star Columbia's pride, Her spell of truth and might. But now, by traitor hands assailed, And dresched in purple gare, it fixthes like a moteor light, Far brighter than before;

For see 1 'tis gloaming o'er the hill—
I shar the welk in ring—
All hail, fair Freedom, sceptre-crowned,
And truth, our only King. I see it waving to the breeze,

Once more the signal cry, And crowds in homage gladly bend, For it, to do and die. Mothinks thy fathor's spirit comes And whitpers once again;
The brave, though fall'n, mourn them not,
They do not die in vain.

We'll knoel and kiss our ransomed flag, Embrace it as of old, Its cause has triumphed; let us bless Kach starry crimsoned fold, See | see | 'tis waving to the breese, The first to greet the day...' 'Twill gleam o'er a united land For ever and for aye.

THE LIFE CLOCK

There is a little mystic clock, No human eye hath seen, That beateth on and beateth on, From morning until e'en.

And when the soul is wrapped in sleep, It ticks, and ticks the livelong night, And never runneth down wond rous is that work of art, Which knells the passing hour; But art ne'er formed, nor mind conceived, The life-c'ock's magic power.

Nor set in gold nor decked with gems, By wealth and pride possessed; But rich or poor, or high or low, Each bears it in his breast.

When life's deep stream, 'mid budding flow

Ali still and softly glides, Like the wavelet's step, with a gentle beat, It warms of passing tides.

When threat'ning darkness gathers o'er,

And hope's bright visions flee, Like the sullen strokes of the muffled car, It beateth heavily.

WHERE'S MY BABY.

BY MARY FORMAN.

He was a grand baby, this hero of mine. One of your splendidly developed, stirring boys, with good powerful lungs, big bright eyes, they rings of tightly ourling, and a frame that might have been a model for an infant Horoules. Not one of the fat, heavy sorf, but stout, sturdy, and active, He was ten months old, and looked sixteen, and his name was Freddy Lawson.

Monday last, Reyes, Reinfreiman s and Sumner's Divisions were at the Locust headquarters.

The 2d Rnode Island was in advance. They are all in good spirits. Since leaving Williams burg they have lived upon the beef of the country which they explured. They have had neither salt nor bread. When the troops advanced from York town they were without rations. The advance of the army will be impeded in consequence of the want of provisions.

The sum of the country were without rations and Sumner's Gen. Hallsck—the largest column under any one commander in the field—is so close upon the rebels works and army, and his movements are now so menacing and dangerous, that it will be impossible for Beauregard to remain inactive for standards.

The position of the rebel forces between the Rappahannock and Chickahominy, is extremely heazardous. McDowell holds the river in front, while in the rear, no further from McDowell's advance than fifty miles the heavy column of McClellan is prepared to cut off their retreat.
